HOME SWEET HOME

The lizard lovely inn has everything a lizard could dream of. It has a nice feeding area, it has its own private area, climbing spot and more! Brown anoles feed on small arthropods such as crickets, moths, ants, grasshoppers, cockroaches, mealworms, spiders, and waxworms. They may also eat other lizards, such as skinks and the carolina anoles, lizard eggs, and their own molted skin and detached tails. If near water, they eat aquatic arthropods or small fish. They also eat some really small pieces of fruit or juice from the fruit. Brown anoles are found in Cuba and the Bahamas. These lizards live in almost any habitat and are often seen in suburban and urban areas. They occur in areas with open vegetation, grasses, shrubs and in forested areas. This habitat is for brown anoles but can be used for other types of lizards.
